Private Equity Master

30 Mar 2026

This master class introduces the different Private Market investments and their unique characteristics before diving deeper into Private Equity investing. It discusses why investors should consider Private Equity, how they can invest, and the challenges of building a Private Equity allocation. Using case studies and examples it explains the structure of a typical closed-end fund, along with the commitment-based investing approach and the resulting cashflow pattern known as the J-curve. The course also addresses the different return measures such as multiples or IRR and compares different valuation approaches used in private equity.
